The first meeting was in Wendel's Assembly Rooms in West Forty-fourth street. Judge Charles & Flammer presided here, and a large erowd was waiting for the Fassett party. In the front row sat a colored woman, the same that had cheered Mr. Fassett so heartily the night before.

She held a little black baby in her arms, and as Mr. Fassett came walking down the aisle she held it up for his inspection. Mr. Fassett recognized the lady, and bowed to her, forming with his lips, the lady avers, the words,

He arrived at the Lyceum Opera House, Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue, reached the platform, raised his right arm in the "fellow-citizen" movement, when some one yelled: "Take that coat off." In an instant a roar of laughter broke out. Mr. Fassett seemed discomfitted and after a brief pause said:

MR. BELDEN NOT READY TO ANSWER

But These Questions About the World's Fair Will Answer Themselves

Congressman James J. Belden told a Sun reporter yesterday that he had not seen the three categorical questions put to him by the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor at the big Democratic demonstration the night before. The three questions were raisett urging the immediate passage of the World's raif bill at Albasy?

What were the influences that robbed New York of the World's Fair and gave it to Chicago?

The Congressman adjusted his glasses and read the matter over very slowly. Then he read it over again. He paused and thought a while and then said:

"I don't think I want to commit myself. If I answer one question I'll have to answer all, and I can't tell where that will leadlto. As for the telegram that I sent to Senator Fassett urging the passage of the bill at Albany, that is, of course, a matter of history. I was, as everybody knows, very anxious that New York should have the World's Fair, as were Mr. Depew, Mr. Miller, and many other Reputilicans. I did all in my power to bring it about. Mr. Flower and I worked together there at Washington. All that is a matter of history, and there's no need of my telling it. Of course, I'm sorry New York didn't get the World's Fair. But I'm a Republican, and a stanch supporter of Mr. Fassett.

"I don't care to answer the questions put by Mr. Sheehan, at any rate not before I have had time to think about them and talk the matter over. I don't care to be catechized by a Democrat."

The telegram that is the subject of Mr. Sheehan's question and referred to by Mr. Beiden as a matter of history, was sent from Washington in the name of the Congressional delegation of the State by authorization. It was epigrammatic and forceful. "Delay means defeat" was the burden of it.

ENDORSED BY COLORED DEMOCRATS. No Lack of Enthusiasm for Flower and the County Ticket.

Hundreds of colored Democrats crowded the Excelsior Assembly Rooms at Twenty-sixth street and Seventh avenue last night, and shouted themselves hoarse for Roswell P.

The occasion was a mass meeting held under the direction of the Roswell P. Flower Colored Democratic Association of the Eleventh district, which has 350 members. The President of the association, H.F. Downing, who was Consul at St. Paul de Loanda under the Cleveland Administration, said: "In 1876 there were only two colored Democratic 1876 there were only two colored Democratic votors in New York, and I was one. This year there are thousands."

Amos J. Cummings said, among other things:

"I have been asked by your President for my opinion as to the solution of the negro problem. My answer is that the negro will settle that for himself. Let him become educated and wealthy, and let him walk on an equality with his fellow men, and there will he no problem. I recognize no color line in politics and the Democratic party recognizes no color line in politics and the Democratic party recognizes no color line in politics and the Democratic party recognizes that the colored man must be a Republican assume a colored man must be a Republican because his skin is black. On that basis they say his vote must be counted whether he votes or not. The Democratic party recognizes that the colored man has the right of independent thought."

Mr. Cammings then went on to discuss the different issues of the campaign. The free ballot, he said, had been settled but not the equality of the ballot. The distribution of the districts was entirely unequal and unfair to the city population. Gov. Hill had repeatedly called attention to this fact, but the Republicans would make no move to change the antiquated apportion ment of sixteen years ago.

His speech occasioned great enthusiasm, and

His speech occasioned great enthusiasm, and every mention of Fassett's name was hissed by the colored men.

Other speakers were: Senator Cantor, Gen. Martin T. McMahon, James A. Morchead, and the liev, C. N. Grandison.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing Fassett as an enemy of labor, and especially for his opposition to the World's Fair bill, and pledging the support of the association to the Democracy's State and county candidates.

of Having Fun with Jones-Trying to Coax Cash Out of Philadelphia and Vex-ing New York Republican Importers. The Democratic campaign managers are unusually busy these days. The regular docu-ment distribution work, and telegraphic and mail correspondence on details of organiza-tion is supplemented by the care of a big staff of stump speakers scattered through the

Their appointments have to be kept track of and the machinery for supplying the many calls must run smoothly. A sample of the way the thing works, which contains a little trace of a joke on ex-Senator Thomas F. Grady, was part of yesterday experience.

Late on Monday night Clerk De Freest was busy trying to figure out how to get Col. John L Fellows to last night's meeting at Ithica. "It is easy enough," said Grady. "The 0:10 train from here will get him to Utica in time to have dinner and catch the 5 o'clock train. Then, with only one more change, he can get to Ithaca at 8 o'clock. An old campaigner ought not to mind that."

Then Mr. Grady chuckled at the picture presented to his mind of Col. Fellows rushing across the State to make a speech in a town five minutes after he reached it by a full day's travel. It is a good thing that he had some fun out of it then, for it proved that the Colonel could not go, and Mr. Grady himself had to take the flying trip that no old campaigner ought to mind. Chairman Murphy of the State Committee reported on his arrival from up the river last night that everything looked as well as any Democrat could wish it to look. He says that the prospects have improved steadily.

the prospects have improved steadily.

Among the callers upon Executive Chairman Griffin last evening was ex-Mayor William R. Grace. Mr. Grace expressed a very optimistic opinion of the campaign, and said that he was heartily interested in the success of the State ticket and is doing all that he can for the party in the fight.

Cord Meyer, Jr. of Queens, a former member of the State Committee and a famous political hustler, said that things were in excellent shape out his way.

Husted Kenyon, Fox & Co., with Oilie Teall, at the Republican headquarters across the street, said that they were feeling pretty good, also. This was not on account of any news about the condition of political affairs at any particular part of the State. Part of it was on account of the hope and expectation that Lieut. Gov. Jones would stir things up to-day. They did not care whether he appointed a Stockier, a County Democrat, or a Republican to the Common Pleas Court. All they cared was that he should do something to testify to his diagruntlement.

But their greatest satisfaction was over the Union League Club money raising meeting and the response from cutside of the State to appeais for similar help made to the manufacturers. The fact is that while ignoring State issues and obscuring national ones as well as they can to cry "Tiger." the Republican campaign managers are soliciting subscriptions north, south, east, and west, without any regard for the State boundary lines. They do this on the plea that a victory in this State this fall will settle next year's fight. Their cry is:

"It is cheaper for you to put up for us on this fight than it would be to put up for a hard national fight. Give us plenty of money this year our victory next year is assured. We will claim that it is a verdict on the national issues, and the claim will be believed all over the country."

This appeal is proving very effective. Only one serious setback has been suffered. The Mavuetter on what issue or pretence it is done, if we make New York State Republican th for Him in Advance. At Democratic headquarters Congressman Cummings has a translation of the speech prepared for J. Sloat Fassett to be delivered at the meeting in the Germania Assembly Rooms on Monday evening. It was in German and was given to a German reporter in advance who was sent to report Mr. Fassett's German speech. It is evident that Mr. Fassett had endeavored to commit it to memory in vain. The translation of the speech as prepared and of the speech that Mr. Fassett really delivered are here in parallel columns:

FASSETT PONIED MIS GERMAN. That Speech He Broke Down In Fixed Up

The Preparal Speech.

It preparal Speech.

It gives me great pleasure Gentlemen. I thank you defer the preparation of the second of th more in German, and most heartily for your kindness. [Applause.]

The funny part of this is that Mr. Fassett had sat some time with his friend Eidman and had made a heroic effort to learn by rote the German oratory fixed up for him. And even with this experience fresh in his mind he descended to the low trick of flourishing an advance copy of Mr. Flower's speech surreptitiously obtained and by professing faisely that it was to be an "extemporaneous address" raised a laugh. Then he ostentatiously waved away a proffered glass of water and soon afterward played the coat trick. Unfortunately the latter was misunderstood. Instead of being pleased at his "condescension." the worthy Germans of the audience were displeased.

So He and the Other Medina Fassetts Won' Vote for J. Siont.

MEDINA, Oct. 20.-A. P. Fassett of this place is a cousin of J. Sloat Fassett, Republican candidate for Governor of New York. He was very proud of his relationship when he learne of the nomination, and when Fassett and Vrooman passed through Medina several days ago the local Fassett was the first one on the train to greet his cousin. He was dressed in his best suit of clothes, and as the train rolled in he was standing on the highest express truck available. Candidate Fassett spoke to the citizens until Candidate Fassett spoke to the citizens until the train was signalled to start, and his relative detarmined to go through to Lockport with J. Sloat. On the train, when the two Fassetts met, there was a one-sided coldness, which greatly annoyed the old man from Medina. The elder Fassett was fairly snubbed, and left the train at the first station and returned home. He is a considerable politician, and his enemies guyed him usmercifully when the facts were learned to-day. He has turned over a new leaf, and he will yote and work earneatly for the election of Roswell P. Flower. His score of relatives will do likewise.

OH, DO FOTE FOR STEWART.

The Great Wicked One Exhorts the Little Wicked Oues,

The Wicked One opened the canvass fo Lispenard Stewart up in the Thirteenth last night. He filled the Opera House in Eighth avenue with a crowd of little wicked ones trotted out Mr. Platt's man, and then showed the immaculats Mr. Stewart. He didn't introduce the McKeever Brothers, the proud possessor of three excise licenses, in whose hands the Fifth avenue millionaire has put his canvass, and by whose grace he hopes to reach the Senato again. Mr. Stewart made a speech, the substance of which was that if he prossed the button the audience would do the rest, and at a signal from the Wicked One the little wicked ones howled. The millionaire smiled and sat down. The little wicked ones howled "Gibbs! Gibbs!" Gibbs responded. "Boys," he said, "we're in it this time, if we weren't last year. I want you to understand that if you don't vote for and elect the Hon, Lispenard Stewart for Sen-ator New York city won't have a Republican representative in the upper House of the Legislature. You've got to take off your coats and hustle for Stewart I know what work it is to run for Senator in his district, for I've been there. I've known Lispenard Stewart, and I know he's able and is just the man we want in the Senate. Now work for him-do,

"Now, about your Assembly candidate, I have the honor. We are harmonious this year. We are regular. Last time we had a little hard luck and had to stump it, but we are all right now, and all we've got against us are a lot of people who wouldn't vote the Republican ticket if they could."

people who wouldn't vote the Republican ticket if they could."

There was a conspicuous absence of colored men at the blowout. The reason for it was that nine-tenths of the colored voters of the district were around in Excelsior Hall, at Twentleth street and Seventh avenue whooping it up for Gen. McMahon and all the rest-of the Democratic ticket. One reason why they are sore on Stewart is that the millionaire backers discriminate against them in one of the three saloons. This particular place is at the corner of Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, and the colored men say that though they cannot get drinks in McKeever's two other saloons, when they want a drink here the bartenders put up the price of whiskey to 25 cents, while white men buy it for 10 cents.

The millionaire candidated did a little work in his own behalf yesterday. He thought. The result of his thinking was the conception of an idea. The idea was to make it impossible for any man to vote in the name of another. He went to Republican headquarters and tod Oille Teall about it, and Oille declared that he was a great man. The idea was this: Employ a man with a camera for each of the places of registration. Place him so that he would face every man who came in to register and have him press the button every tims. When election day comes any man who came to vote whose picture wasn't in the collection thus secured would be a fraud and could be arrested at once and sent to jail. Oille and the millionaire candidate were just going out to buy the cameras and hire the men, when Mr. Platt caught them and spanked them. He said something about boomerangs.

That is the reason Mr. stewart didn't expand on his plan at the blowout last night. In fact, after it was over he told a Sun reporter that he had only proposed the thing in a joke.

"I told the boys," he said, "that it would frighten the fellows who were going to vote twice, but I didn't mean it. We are not afraid of colonization or anything like that in this dietrick.

The Wicked One heard him, and, placing the index finger of his right hand along his nose lengthwise, he smiled. Mr. Stewart walked "How is the Truly Good One?" the reporter asked the Wicked One. "Cowie?" said the Wicked One. "Why he's a kicker. He ain't in it."
"Like the man what fell out of a balloon, that's how Cowie is," said one of the little Wicked Ones.

M'MACKIN DUMB AS A DOOR POST. Lent Only His Face to the Republican Sham Labor Meeting.

No one was killed in the crush at Cooper Union last night. No great swarms of voters pressed into the basement auditorium to fill seats and aisles and to compel short breaths at long intervals. On the contrary, when the doors were opened at 7:45-and one of the policemen told a story connected with the gas bill about the reason why the doors were not opened sooner-but, at any rate, when they were finally opened, a thousand people straggled in and afterward about 500 more. The committee waited until 8:30 before it finally filed on the stage, headed by that friend of labor and hero of the Coogan campaign, John McMackin, ballot reformer. It is pretty hard to say just what this meeting was about. The advertisements said and the chairman, a certain Edward Rock, alleged engineer, also said that the object was the blanket ballot. He said some one or other wanted a blanket ballot. He said that if this person didn't get it he would get angry.

As soon as Mr. Wilkinson, described on the cards as a tailor, began to speak it was clear that Mr. Rock and the advertisments were mistaken. Mr. Wilkinson shouted for J. Sloat Fassett, and there was mighty applause. At this a small and, up to this time, deluded section of the audience arose and withdrew amid shouts of "Put the Democrats out!"

Those who were left turned in and had a fine old Republican love feast, at which Hugh Greenan and Cornelius Donovan and several other speakers, among them a Miss Maloney, who had a grudge against Mr. Hill because he is a bachelor, preached Republican doctrine. When one of the speakers began to talk about "J. Sloat Fassett, the young champion of labor," a man in the back of the house—a printer, perhaps—rose to a point of order. But the man was sat upon, and withdrew.

All this while the here of the Coogan campaign sat back with a smile of seruph-like cunction on his face.

"Is Mr. McMackin going to speak?" was asked.

"Maybe," said a thin man with a long red moustache, winking mysteriously.

"Why this wink? What sthe secret?"

"It something happens he will. If some one in the crowd jumps on him he will answer. The meeting will get a surprise. He'il tell all about the Coogan campaign."

But never a word did McMackin say. The most beautiful incident of this beautiful evening was when some one unidentified shouted: "What did the Republican party ever do for labor?"

At this Mr. Wilkinson arose and said: "This is a ballot meeting." So a ballot meeting let the chairman, a certain Edward Rock, alleged engineer, also said that the object was the

BACK FROM MOUNT ST. ELIAS. RUSSELL AND HIS EXPLOREDS RE-TURN FROM ALASKA.

Again Defeated in Their Efforts to Climb the Great Mountain—They Say it is Gver 18,000 Feet High—Russell Cut Of From His Party for Days in a Storm. SEATTLE, Oct. 20.-Prof. I. C. Russell has returned safely from his tour of explorations at St. Eliaa. The party left here on May 30 by the revenue cutter Bear to begin the season of explorations under the auspices of the National Geographic Society. Prof. Russell took with him J. H. Crumback. Thomas P. Stamy, Thomas White, Neil Mc-Carty, and Will C. Moore of this State-men who had done considerable exploring in Olympia-and Frank G. Warner of Hartford, Conn. The first four had accompanied the previous expedition.

They reached Icy Bay, and when they at-with Lieut. Robinson and four members of the Bear's crew were drowned. With the exception of this mishap all has gone well, and every one has been in good health. Some of the provisions and instruments went down with the fil-fated boat, but most of them were washed ashore later. The surf was so high that it took three days to make a landing.

Having reaened the shore, the party started for the northern side of Mount St. Ellas. One day's marching brought them to the snow line. For two months following they spent their time in the snow and ice, and for at least thirty nights they slept in the snow. The rest of the time they found beds on the tocks of glacial moraines. Their clothing was weollen, and they were often drenched to the skin and slept without change of garments. Yet in spite of all that they never caught cold. Their food was carried in fifty pound cases. An oil store was used above the line of vegetation. The first six weeks were spent in crossing the glassiers on the mountain's northern side, which offers the only possible route for ascent. Their highest camp was pitched 8,000 feet above the sea level and they waited twelve days, hoping for an opportunity to reach the summit. They made several attempts but each time were driven back by the snow. On one occasion they reached a point 14,500 feet above sea level, but after twenty hours of incessant climbing they had to take refuge again in camp utterly exhausted. At one time a storm came down when Prof. Russell was alone, on the highest point, and for four days he was cut off from the rest of the party.

Prom their high elevation a grand view to the north was obtained over a country upon which human ere has never rested. They could take in a sweep of 300 miles from Mount Fairweather. 150 miles southeast to a point 150 miles northeast. The country in sight was about forty or fifty miles wide.

It is a scene of utter desoiation, said Prof. Russell; "a stretch of snow fields, glaciers, and ice, broken only by ice-capped peaks. The general altitude of the snow filed, signer, and ice, broken only by ice-capped peaks. The general altitude of the snow files is some 800 feet above the sealevel one has been in good health. Though the soil is not more than two or three feet thick, there is plenty of moisture to furnish plant life of all kinds.

The party went inland thirty or forty miles and returned by the same route. When they reached Ley Bay again they marched east 150 miles along the shore to Disenchant ment Bay. This they explored and found to run thirty miles further than it is laid down on the maps. After stretching inland it turns and the head is very near the ocean.

The Government steamer Pinta took them to Sitka, where they took the City of Topeka for this city. Prof. Russell says the region is full of interest for scientific men, and work will undoubtedly be continued there. He does not know whether he will go again. He will remain in this city for a week or two, and then start for Washington.

The most prominent feature of these recess discussions has been in connection with John Bardsley, now in the penitentiary for the part he took in robbing the Philadelphia and State Treasuries. It is the general bellef that Bardsley knows sufficient to cause the removal of Messrs. Boyer and McCamant, but the Republicans and the State officers are consoling themselves with the bellef that Bardsley will repeat his recent conduct before the criminal court in Philadelphia, and refuse to open his mouth. repeat his recent conduct before the criminal court in Philadelphia, and refuse to open his mouth.

If this should be the case it will certainly strengthen the beliefthroughout the State that the State officers are guilty of the charges against them.

Next to Bardsley, no other man could give so much important testimony in this case as Cashier Livsey of the State Treasury. Livsey has been missing since July, and all efforts by officers to beat him have failed. But, with the facts now before him, the Attorney-General believes he can prove the charges. If so, it is doubtful whether the signatures of two-thirds of the of the Senate as required by the Constitution, can be obtained to an address to the Governor recommending the removal of the secused officers. Of the 50 members of the Senate there are 20 Republicans, 19 Democrats, and 2 vacancies.

John Bardsley declares most emphatically that his lips are sealed and no power on earth can open them. He denies having ever given any foundation for the rumor that he was to go before the Senate and give in detail the history of his transactions, both public and private, while in the Treasurer's office.

North and East River Railroad. The discon-tented stockholders, led by Masses. Samuel W. Smith and Edward C. Smith, didn't even show their faces, and no votes were cast for them. In the language of one of the officers, their efforts to create discontent among the stocka flasco. They had complained of alleged extravagance and they wanted an increase of

Mr. S. W. Smith has been quoted as saying that President G. Hilton Scribner would vote several thousand old proxies. Mr. Scribner said that all the proxies that he voted were dated October, and of these there were over 10,000. The total number of shares of the company is 18,000, of which about 3,000, held by estates and absentees, could not be voted, so that all Mr. Smith could possibly have voted would be 5,300 shares. His claim to over 0,500 shares, says Mr. Scribner, was groundless.

President Scribner says that the "old fogy" element, as the opposition terms it, will run the road a while longer. Mr. Smith intimates that there will be another row later on, and that he expects to carry his point sooner or later. The Mesers. Smith together hold over 3,000 shares. The new directors elected are Charles A. Hotchkiss, Demas Strong, and Morris K. Jesup.

OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI FIGHT.

The Court Beeldes in Favor of the B. and O., but there May Be Further Trouble. CINCINNATI, Oct. 20 .- Judge Hunt of the Superior Court, at Cincinnati has refused to enjoin the voting of the Ohio and Mississippi stock of Brown, Shipley & Co. of London, held by proxy. It amounts to 147,000 shares, being a majority of the stock. The result is a victory for the Baltimore and Ohio sult is a victory for the Baltimore and Onio people.

J. H. Smith, who presided at the first Ohio and Mississippi stockholders' meeting and precipitated trouble by adjourning the session on a viva voce vote, is not discouraged, despite the fact that the courts decided his acts were illegal. He has notified the minority stockholders to meet here Nov. 16 and elect three directors. Meanwhile the Baltimore and Ohio road is quietly perfecting plans of reorganization, and does not seem the least worried on account of Mr. Smith's threat.

Return Jonathan Meigs, the venerable Clerk of the Court of the District of Columbia, died at his residence in Washington on Monday aged 90. He was at his dosk on Saturday. He was born in Clark county. Ky., in April, 1801, and was appointed Clerk of the District Court in 1863. His peculiar given name was first borne by his greatuncle, a native of Connecticut. The father of this greatuncle had been repeatedly rejected by a Quakeress of whom he was enamored. After one of her refusals he was riding away from her house with the resolution never to return, when the young woman called after him. "Return Jonathan, return Jonathan." These words gave him so much happiness that he bestowed them on his first child, and some member of each succeeding generation has borne them as a name. on Fernando Guzman, once President of Nicaragua, is dead. Picked Up a Drifting Crew.

The schooner Grace Bradley of Thomaston. which arrived yesterday, brought to port Cart Smith and six men of the schooner E. T. Cottingham of Camden, which sailed from New tingham of Camden, which sailed from New York for Virginia on Oct. 11, and was abandoped at sea on Oct. 12.

Capt. Smith reports that about 5:30 A. M. on Oct. 15. In latitude 14:38. longitude 15:01. A gale was encountered. The mainsail, foresail, and jib were blown away, and the schooner sprung a leak. For two days an itwo nights the crew halled through a hole cut in the forecastle deck. The water gained so fast that the vessel had to be abandened and the schooner sunk ten minutes after the Captain and crew took to a small boat. After drifting around for four hours they were picked up by the Graze Bradley. The Captain and crew lost everything but the clothes they were.
